Water Conservation Month

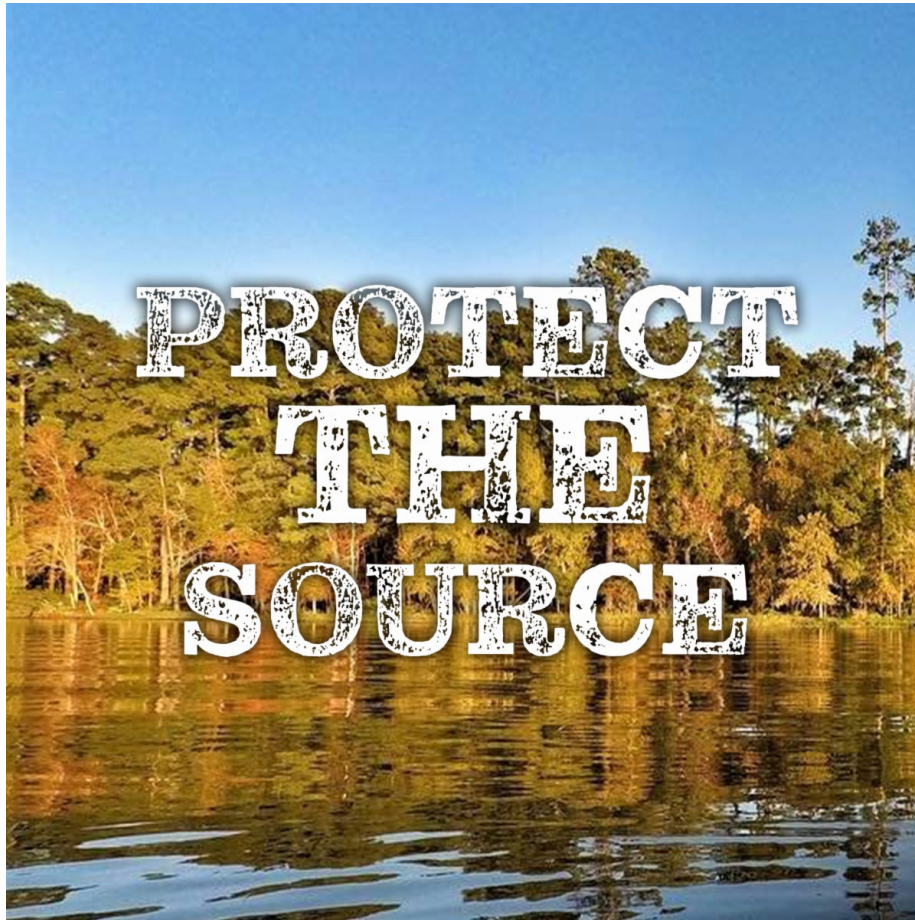

What are nutrients in water and why does it matter? When too much nitrogen and phosphorus enter our lakes and rivers, they can trigger harmful algal blooms, fish kills, and a decline in overall water quality. You can help protect Texas waterways by reducing fertilizer and chemical use, maintaining native vegetation along shorelines and properly manage pet and yard waste. Healthy habits at home make a big impact. Let's keep Texas waters clean!

Follow Trusted Weather Sources

Springtime means increased chances of rain in our region. Make sure to be weather aware for those springtime showers by following trusted weather sources such as local weather stations and the National Weather Service.

SJRA works to protect the water resources we have today so that 100 years from now, there is water security for our children and grandchildren. Learn more about how you can do your part to conserve water here!

SJRA Weather Aware Resource Guide

It's that time of year in Southeast Texas when temperatures start to rise, the humidity in the air feels thick, and it is time to get prepared for hurricane season. This is also the time when our local meteorologists start to throw around the phrase "be weather aware." June is the beginning of hurricane season, so now is the time to know how to be weather aware in case of a storm event. It is very important to pay attention to the forecast, become familiar with your location in the watershed, and know where to get quick but accurate information.

SJRA is Recruiting!

A recruitment banner for the San Jacinto River Authority (SJRA). It features a collage of three images: on the left, a worker in a tan shirt operating a water treatment facility; in the center, a smiling man in a tan polo shirt; and on the right, a worker in a blue shirt and cap on a bridge. Overlaid on the center image is the text 'We are recruiting!' in white script. At the bottom of the banner is the SJRA logo, which includes the text 'SJRA' in large white letters and 'SAN JACINTO RIVER AUTHORITY' in smaller white letters below it, set against a blue background with white wavy lines.

The San Jacinto River Authority (SJRA) receives no money from the state, nor does it collect any type of taxes.

SJRA's mission is to develop, conserve, and protect the water resources of the San Jacinto River basin. Covering all or part of seven counties, the organization's jurisdiction includes the entire San Jacinto River watershed, excluding Harris County. The SJRA is one of two dozen river authorities in the State of Texas, and like other river authorities, its primary purpose is to implement long-term, regional projects related to water supply and wastewater treatment.
